Certificate of Medical Consultation:

THOMAS PRICE is under my care for his treatment of CML. I am one of the physicians charged with monitoring his treatment and his ability to carry out his daily routines. He was unable to work on October 4 and 5 because of dizziness and fever. As round I of his treatment comes to its conclusion in mid-October, he will become stronger and more robust. His immune response has been compromised in this first round of treatment and he has suffered numerous low level infections as an inevitable side-effect. While challenging to deal with, these are not indications of his overall health and pose no threat to his long-term positive prognosis. He will continue to monitor his temperature daily and have blood counts monitored weekly. He is permitted to work without restriction provided his temperature is 99.5 or below. If he registers a fever of 99.5 or higher he is to consult me before making a decision about how to participate in the activities he has scheduled for the day.
