Hi Jevon, as a temporary staffing agency, we have to follow through with client requests to remove staff whenever they ask, this is a decision from the supervisor. He did not feel that you were showing the level of service or positive attitude with guests that Cirque du Soleil seeks to offer.

I am sorry that you did not receive another chance for the uniform, but that ultimately wasn't the only reason he decided to remove you as of yesterday. We can help offer other work assignments, but we cannot change the outcome with Cirque as their decision is final.

I was though that's what I'm saying he is just saying that because I don't want to talk to him bc I didnt like saying nothing to him and this is crazy the job never stated that we had to be friends with the supervisor

You do have to be able to communicate professionally with your supervisor in any job offer, this is very important, so choosing not to speak is definitely grounds for them saying you don't seem like you want to work or improve how you interact with guest, as well.

I have never said I don't want to work,

... to prove that I do

I have never said I don't want to work, I have witnesses, to prove that I do speak and interact with the guest which is my door partner. Respectfully It's not in the job description that I have to have interaction with any manager. Do he have a lawyer? I will be suing for wrongful termination I did nothing wrong.

Hello Jevon, I will assist you by connecting you via email with our HR department. I would like to make clear that you are not terminated and are only not allowed to work with this client. At this time you are in good standing with The Service Companies and free to pick up any open assignments outside this location.

Ok that's fine and thank you it's just wrong that he is doing this all because I didnt say bye to him last night the first time he said it
